STATIONS OF THE CROSS

Have you ever thought about saying or meditating on the Stations of the Cross at home as a family? Many families cannot make it to church for those scheduled times for "The Stations." The most important element of this devotion is what effect it has in our lives, or how it changes our heart. Sometimes, the Stations can have their greatest impact on us when they are said together at home as a family. Following is a "family" way of the cross.

The Stations were not moments of failure for Jesus or the people involved in His passion and death. These were moments of great courage and heroism. The reflections that follow also focus on key moments in your life. Some occur daily. Hopefully, this journey will help you to see the times of courage and heroism in your own "Way of the Cross."

† Jesus Is Condemned To Death †

Remember the time when someone misunderstood or misjudged your words or actions? Consider the times you too have misunderstood or misjudged the words or actions of another. Your life has really known both Pilate and Jesus in this Station.

These experiences can help you to be more considerate of the reasons or motives behind the actions of other people. Perhaps the experiences can move you to support those who are misjudged.
